

What We Do

State Health Agency Activities

Prevent Diseases

State health agencies prevent diseases within their communities by:

Performing screenings for diseases, such as:

Providing population-based primary prevention services, such as:

Directly performing vaccine order management and inventory distribution for childhood and adult immunizations:

Promote Health

State health agencies promote population health by directly providing many vital public health services within their communities, including:

Treatment for diseases, such as:

Maternal and child health services, such as those for:

Other clinical services including:

Protect Health

State health agencies work diligently to protect the public's health by collecting and maintaining real-time data through:

Laboratory activities:

Public health registries track:

Disease investigation and surveillance activities detect:

Environmental health activities include:

Partner for Innovative Solutions

To fulfill their missions, almost all state health agencies collaborate and exchange information with many different partners, including:

- ▶ Local health departments
- ▶ Hospitals
- ▶ Community health centers

State health agencies are working across the country to actively prevent avoidable diseases and conditions, promote healthy communities, and protect the public's health.

TO LEARN MORE ABOUT OUR WORK, VISIT WWW.ASTHO.ORG/PROFILE

This publication was supported by the Grant or Cooperative Agreement Number, NU38OT000161, funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Its contents are solely the responsibility of the authors and do not necessarily represent the official views of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention or the Department of Health and Human Services. Support for this publication was provided in part by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. The views expressed here do not necessarily reflect the views of the Foundation.